

Abstract of the Disclosure

A calculation service providing system, comprising calculation servers, a Web server and terminals which are connected to one another on a network, wherein each of the calculation servers stores one or more applications for providing calculation service, wherein the Web server stores and publishes on the network one or more procedure data files, in each of which procedure data defining a calculation service using the one or more applications stored in one or more of the calculation servers is described, and wherein each of the terminals executes a procedure processing program for having one or more of the calculation servers execute one or more applications on the basis of the procedure data described in the procedure data file downloaded from the Web server.